

THE TRIAL LIST

For the Term of Court Commencing Monday, November 20.

CASES TO BE TRIED.

Summons In Assumpsit—Bedford Borough
Vs. Bedford Electric Light, Heat
and Power Company.Commonwealth vs. J. M. Barber, Charge, hawking and peddling, on oath of F. P. Gilchrist, E. H. Brightwell and
D. W. Beam. There are four indictments.Commonwealth vs. Isaac Crawford, F. & B., prosecutor, Mary Anna; same
vs. William Young, prosecutor, Little Brown; same vs. John S. Conner, prosecutor, Maggie E. Fisher.Score was made in the first half.
Everett won the toss and chose the north goal. Price kicked off to the ten yard line and Everett ran the ball back forty-five yards before they were downed. They then forced it over into Bedford's territory by line bulldog and end runs. It was on Bedford's ground that the ball stayed during the remainder of the half. Only once was Bedford's goal in any danger.
That was when Everett had the ball on Bedford's fifteen yard line, where they lost it on downs.In the second half Tate kicked off for Everett, about twenty-five yards into Bedford's territory. Hall made a fair catch and kicked it back about forty yards. Bedford kept forcing the ball down the field by line bulldog until the ten yard line was reached, when McLaughlin went around the end for a touchdown. Hornet failed to kick the goal. Tate again kicked off and Bedford ran the ball back to almost the centre of the field before downing. After a few semimares Heckerman got the ball on a fumble and ran down the field to within ten yards of the goal before downed. There remained a few minutes to play, but Everett had their opponents from crossing their goal again.Heckerman's run was the principal feature of the game. McLaughlin Hughes and Hall played well for Bedford and Herman and Jones for Everett.
The clean work of Miller, Everett's little quarterback, deserves much praise. The visitors seemed satisfied that they were fairly beaten and certainly deserve credit for conducting themselves in a manly, straightforward way.It rained all the time the game was in progress and the slippery grounds, spoiled a number of well-planned
plays. Notwithstanding the downpour, there was a fairly large crowd of enthusiastic spectators present. Football seems to have many ardent advocates in Bedford.

New Disease.

At a recent meeting of the Catholic bishops of Pennsylvania it was decided that a new diocese should be formed in the vicinity of Altoona from parishes
now under the jurisdiction of Bishop Phelan, of Pittsburgh, and Bishop Shanahan, of Harrisburg. The new jurisdiction will comprise the counties of Cambria, Huntingdon, Somerset, Bedford, Blair, Centre, Clinton and Fulton. To compensate the diocese of Harrisburg for the loss, Schuylkill and Carbon counties will be added to its territory. Altoona, the future seat of the new bishop, contains four Catholic churches, each possessing a large parochial school, under the care of the Sisters and Franciscan Brothers.
It is not known when the determination of the bishops will be put into effect, but the limits of the new diocese will likely be fixed before the end of the winter. On whose head will rest the mitre of the new see has not been announced, but among those likely to receive the honor are the Rev.
Morgan Sheedy, of Altoona, Dr. Garvey, of the Scranton diocese, and two prominent pastors of Philadelphia.Mrs. Barbara White, wife of D. D.
White, died at her home in Altoona on Friday, November 10. Deceased was born in Liberty township, this county, July 4, 1845. She was united in marriage to D. D. White January 8, 1867.
They removed to Altoona eight years ago. Her husband and four children survive her. The remains were taken to Paxton on Saturday and interred in the graveyard at St. Luke's Reformed church on Sunday morning.Harry Lee, of Woodbury, was called to his eternal home on Friday, November 10. He was aged thirty-five years. He had been ill for almost a year. For some time he was agent for several life insurance companies.
He is survived by two brothers—W. S.
and W. H. Lee, of Altoona—his wife and two children. His mother, Mrs.
Pannie Lee, of Woodbury, also survived him.

Lost, Strayed or Stolen.

The returns of Constable D. R.

Earnest, of Bedford borough, made at the September term of court, contained some very important items. These papers were filed in the prothonotary's

office. On Tuesday of this week Mr.

Earnest went to get them in order to subpoena witness when, much to his surprise and the astonishment of the prothonotary, it was found that the papers were missing. A thorough search was instituted, but the papers were not found.

INFAMOUS AND UNJUST. Andrew Carnegie, the starch Repub- lican, said iron and steel manufacturer, returned from England last week, and the first thing he did upon landing in America was to deny the stories that he intended to become a citizen of Great Britain, adding that "where a man's treasure is, there his heart is also." The next thing he did was to give expression to his opinion of the war between England and the Boers, of which he said:

"The war against the Boers is most infamous and unjust and it was brought about by England's lust for domain, and is on a par with our attack on the poor Filipinos. These two attacks are a disgrace to both branches of our race."

"The people in the Transvaal and the Orange Free State have a right to rule themselves. One war is an attack on an existing and the other on an embryonic republic."

"It is worse for us to attack the Filipinos than for England to attack the Boers, for we fall from a greater height, as we believe in government by the consent of the governed."

"The best men in England have spoken against the war in the Transvaal and everywhere it is deplored except by those whose interests are served by it. They are a small clique of jingoes, headed by a statesman, I am sorry to say, who sees in the war a chance to fortify his position."

Mr. Carnegie entertains decidedly optimistic views of the business outlook and the prosperity of the country. He said: "I can only look at the business outlook here from abroad, which is some time a good point of view. I believe that nothing can stop 1900 from being a great year of prosperity, always provided that in view of the present excited state of the world and the danger of war begetting war, the United States keeps out of the struggle. Now that this country has foreign possessions there is more danger than ever."

LAST WEEK'S ELECTIONS. The expansionists of the country are pitting each other on the back and gleefully grinning because, they fondly believe, in the elections last week, the imperialistic policy of the Hanna-McKinley clique was enthusiastically endorsed by the voters of this republic. But what are the facts?

Prior to the battle of the ballot boxes was universally acknowledged that the popular interest in the outcome of the contest at the polls centered upon that in four states—Maryland, Nebraska, Ohio and Kentucky. In all of the other states in which elections were held the result was accepted as a foregone conclusion. But in the quartette mentioned vigorous campaigns were conducted and both parties fought valiantly for supremacy.

Looking to Great Britain for a portion of the result of the elections, we find that this ardent admirer of President McKinley's imperialistic policy regards the result as presaging the major's re-nomination. The London Daily Chronicle hails with delight the president's "bold development of imperialistic policy in China," and declares that "this is the sort of courage which commands success; it seems almost inconceivable that he (McKinley) should fail to secure re-election." The London News says: "President McKinley will now have a free hand in the Philippines." Imperialistic England, of course, is well pleased to find even a weak wooden peg upon which to hang its belief that Great Britain will in her future wars for the extension of her empire in Asia and in Africa find in the president of this republic an ally. In this the wish is father to the thought and the hope is founded upon fiction, not fact. While it is natural for McKinley's far-away friends—foreign sympathizers with his policy of conquest—to take this rosie view, the unbiased, honest and observant American citizen fails to see in the result of last week's elections an endorsement of the administration's course or the "renewed lease of public confidence" which the English journals boast over.

The return from McKinley's own state—Ohio—do not justify such an interpretation. But the 50,000 plurality in favor of Judge Nash, the Republican candidate for governor, over John R. McLean, the Democratic nominee, with a vote of 100,000 for Major Jones, the "Golden Rule" aspirant, means an actual majority of 30,000 votes against the administration. Ex-Secretary of State John Sherman, one of the Buckley state's wisest statesmen, attributes Judge Nash's success to his personal popularity and "fails to see where the administration can find any grounds for constraining the result as an endorsement of its policy in the Philippines"—and he is a more competent judge than the imperialistic organs of imperialistic England.

Surely the friends of expansion can find nothing to encourage them in their un-American course in the returns from Nebraska. The result of the election there was a direct condemnation of their policy.

And not a crumb of comfort can the administration glean from the vote in Maryland. Here the land-grabbers received a stinging rebuke. In Maryland the president's policy was put in the fore ground during the campaign. The redoubtable Republican Rough Rider, Governor "Tubby" Roosevelt, of New York, was sent to the rescue of the Maryland Republicans and he earnestly urged the voters to stand by the president in his Philippine warfare and eloquently spoke of the "beauties" of expansion. Yet the districts in which the national issues were most discussed the Republican losses were heaviest and Democratic gains greatest.

The outcome of the election in Kentucky showed but a feeble light upon the sentiment of the voters with regard to the policy pursued by the president. It has truly been said that in the Blue Grass state the contest was a fight against Goebel and Goebelism rather than against McKinley and McKinleyism.

After a careful, conscientious and comprehensive study of last week's elections no broad-gauge citizen will construe the result in a single one of the "pivotal" states as an endorsement of the Hanna administration or of its Philippine policy.

Out of the Klondike.

No one will ever know exactly how much gold was taken from the Klondike fields the past season. Since the English government incurred a royalty, the miners have adopted a system of ruses to dodge taxes, but it is most difficult to deduce how bad and the grip at this time of year. When the system is weakened by such attacks, and the blood-hounds thin and impoverished, the best method is to take Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. This remedy builds up the system. Besides regulating digestion, it cures constipation. It is good for the kidneys and liver, too, stimulating their organs into the proper performance of their functions. Nothing is so good for malarias.

INTERNATIONAL S. LESSON, November 19. PUBLIC READING ON THE SCRIPTURES—Nehe'miah 8:1-12. Read the chapter. Nehe'miah 8:1—"And the ears of all the people were attentive unto the Book of the Law."—Nehe'miah 8:3.

In the heart of man is born a purpose; if that purpose is of heavenly birth its working out is the good of mankind.

Nehe'miah's heart was touched as he beheld the desolate condition of the remaining Jews in Palestine. A purpose was formed in his heart to leave his courtly surroundings and the position of cup-bearer to King Artaxerxes and return to his home land; there rebuild the broken walls of Jerusalem and restore the worship of Jehovah.

Obstacles threatened his plans, but these were overcome and the city walls restored. On the Jewish New Year's Day a bright scene presented itself. In the open space before the water gate gathers an eager throng of early worshippers. All eyes are turned toward a high wooden pulpit where stand Ezra and thirteen priests, clad in robes of office. A silence falls upon the waiting multitude as the roll of scripture is seen.

Glorious News. Comes from Dr. D. B. Gargile, of Wasilla, I. T. He writes: "Four bottles of Electric Bitters have cured Mrs. Brewer of scrofula, which had caused her great suffering for years. Terrible sores would break out on her head and face, and the best doctors could give no help; but her health is complete and her health is excellent."

This shows what thousands have proved—that Electric Bitters is the best blood purifier known. It's the supreme remedy for croup, tetter, salt rheum, ulcers, boils and running sores. It stimulates liver, kidneys and bowels, expels poisons, helps digestion, builds up the strength. Only 50 cents. Sold by J. K. Irvin & Co., Druggists Guaranteed.

A Little Woman Wonder.

No feature of the esplanade of the national export exposition, Philadelphia, has attracted more interest and curiosity than the exhibition of the smallest woman of mature age in the world. This curiosity who is in every way a perfect woman, although only three feet high, was born in Cuba and is known as the "Olive Skinned Midget." She is twenty-six years old and weighs less than a four-year-old baby. Chiquita is an accomplished person, sings with great purity of voice and performs upon a number of musical instruments with great skill. She sings in English, Italian and Spanish and her voice fills the large hall where she gives her performances. Chiquita has a coach drawn by a pony, the whole outfit weighing only one hundred and twenty pounds. The carriage is four feet high from the wheel tires over all and the interior is only two feet and a half in height. Chiquita rides a bicycle which is fourteen inches high, weighs seven pounds and has a wheel diameter of seven inches. This midget of a woman who has been given the name of the "Living Doll," converses with fluency and intelligence in three languages. In addition to her accomplishments as a vocalist, she is an excellent little actress and gives some astonishing impersonations. Chiquita's purse is large and extensive. Her dresses and coats are made in Paris, after the latest and most approved designs of those of the best society women of England and the continent. Chiquita's foot is little larger than a man's thumb. Her head is not much larger than a baseball, but she possesses every physical and mental characteristic of a full grown person and the best of health and most intelligent development.

A recent translation of the scriptures in Yiddish for the Jews is ready for free circulation among this chosen people. Their Messiah says, "My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge." We have this knowledge. They are in famine; not a famine of bread, nor a thirst for water, but of hearing the words of the Lord." Messiah says: "I am the bread of life... Give ye them to eat... Freely ye have received, freely give." The gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Gentile." E. R.

Three Notable Stories.

There are three notable stories in the November Cosmopolitan. The first, by Lloyd Osbourne, is one of those tales of the South seas that this student of Stevenson tells so well. The second is a Thanksgiving story by Howard Marke Hooke, inimitably illustrated by Peter Newell, and the third a tale of reincarnation and ancient and modern love by Saunders Norwell, a new writer, and uniquely illustrated by the Cosmopolitan's recent find in the field of art, Robert J. Campbell.

19TH CENTURY KNIGHOOD."

Present Day Thoughts By Our Regular Correspondent, "Groveson."

Special correspondence of THE GAZETTE. INVESTON, N. Y., November 14.—A knight of old, with couched lance, clattering through present day streets would be laughed at as sort of impudent hypocrite. His heroes would look ridiculous. Our eulogism would bewilder him—Do you produce anything—do you hold life sacred—do you really honor woman as your helpmate? By my Halidon, he would say in surprise, my chums do the work that produces, my arms are trained and ready to kill, my prowess against men is my honor among women until my lady is won; I then enclose her in my castle to work, to wait and to be ignorant. It makes the heart sick to think of the millions of woe-begone, dirt-begrimmed, platform wherein chivalry could disport itself. The olden, golden knight was too often a quacksalver whose deeds were simply those of a refined savage.

The ideals of chivalry were pale rushlights beside the simplest ideals of the simplest men who love and honor freedom. We have changed the measure of a man since then. We now know that the untiring, unspiring classes have no monopoly of knighthood. The gifts of the rich to the poor are less in total value and infinitely less in proportion than the charities of the poor toward each other. We now know that the best glories of our human nature do not flourish under the false idea that chivalry taught regarding power, honor, ease and wealth. Self-forgetfulness, persistent endeavor and kindness are most endangered by such a system.

The domestic virtues of truth, simplicity and gentleness toward all—but chiefly toward those who are weak—are more to be extolled than either the veneer of culture or the hypocrisy of honor, falsely so-called. The everyday knight of the present wears no livery except the livery of soul that makes him the servant of all. He wins no resounding horn, he deems no death to the passer-by, his steed champs no foaming bit; but he nevertheless every inch a knight. His grim hand is on the throttle to stay until Death loosens it. He is in the engine room to save others before he himself attempts to leave. He is the blue-coated care-taker and guide for innocuous women and children on our crowded city streets. He is the hero of the ladies when names impose upon those who have no shadow of a claim upon him, except that of a knightly humanity. Not alone in these public ways does he serve. He is the patient toller hillsides and in factory. Clad in oversalls or in the height of fashion he is convinced that the test of our modern knighthood is this—whether he is doing the thing he is best fitted for in the way that is best for those whom he loves and those yet to come.

The knights of old were scattered sparsely; the knight of to-day is along every pathway, visible to those who have the eyes to see him.

A Little Woman Wonder.

No feature of the esplanade of the national export exposition, Philadelphia, has attracted more interest and curiosity than the exhibition of the smallest woman of mature age in the world. This curiosity who is in every way a perfect woman, although only three feet high, was born in Cuba and is known as the "Olive Skinned Midget." She is twenty-six years old and weighs less than a four-year-old baby. Chiquita is an accomplished person, sings with great purity of voice and performs upon a number of musical instruments with great skill. She sings in English, Italian and Spanish and her voice fills the large hall where she gives her performances. Chiquita has a coach drawn by a pony, the whole outfit weighing only one hundred and twenty pounds. The carriage is four feet high from the wheel tires over all and the interior is only two feet and a half in height. Chiquita rides a bicycle which is fourteen inches high, weighs seven pounds and has a wheel diameter of seven inches. This midget of a woman who has been given the name of the "Living Doll," converses with fluency and intelligence in three languages. In addition to her accomplishments as a vocalist, she is an excellent little actress and gives some astonishing impersonations. Chiquita's purse is large and extensive. Her dresses and coats are made in Paris, after the latest and most approved designs of those of the best society women of England and the continent. Chiquita's foot is little larger than a man's thumb. Her head is not much larger than a baseball, but she possesses every physical and mental characteristic of a full grown person and the best of health and most intelligent development.

A recent translation of the scriptures in Yiddish for the Jews is ready for free circulation among this chosen people. Their Messiah says, "My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge."

We have this knowledge. They are in famine; not a thirst for water, but of hearing the words of the Lord." Messiah says: "I am the bread of life... Give ye them to eat... Freely ye have received, freely give." The gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Gentile." E. R.

Three Notable Stories.

There are three notable stories in the November Cosmopolitan. The first, by Lloyd Osbourne, is one of those tales of the South seas that this student of Stevenson tells so well. The second is a Thanksgiving story by Howard Marke Hooke, inimitably illustrated by Peter Newell, and the third a tale of reincarnation and ancient and modern love by Saunders Norwell, a new writer, and uniquely illustrated by the Cosmopolitan's recent find in the field of art, Robert J. Campbell.

ADMIRAL DEWEY MARRIED.

Ceremony Performed by a Priest Who Had Been a Sailor.

With the simple but impressive ceremonial of the Catholic church, Admiral George Dewey and Mrs. Mildred M. Hazen were wedded at the rectory of St. Paul's church, Washington, D. C., shortly before 10 o'clock Thursday morning of last week. The place where the union would be solemnized was one of Admiral Dewey's most treasured secrets and the bridegroom had taken the pains to keep the public from learning the details of his matrimonial plans, and will be subjected to future modifications by the mutual consent of the parties in interest.

HARDY DUTCHMEN.

Ancestors of the Brave Hours—When Gotham was Ruled by Prince Fighters—Look to the Future.

Special correspondence of THE GAZETTE.

NEW YORK, November 30.—The news from the Transvaal of the tremendous British disaster has kept the city at fever heat during the past week. From the island of Manhattan to the city of Albany and sixty miles beyond there has been a strong and decided element in favor of the Dutch—the greater part of the population two hundred and fifty years ago nursed a hardy and rugged people, in whose veins flowed as blue and imperial a current as ever was in the veins of bolted knight or crowned king. Though in our days its name has not cut a great figure in history, it is not the first time that these hardy Dutchmen looked horns with the British, but in the most desperate straits and fearful sacrifices, such as those which met the blood-stained Duke of Alva on her border, and when, unable to maintain her liberty, rather than submit to this brutal invader, cut the dykes for hundreds of miles and gave their homes back to the dominion of the sea. For the maintenance of a nation's liberty history records no similar sacrifice. Traversed in every portion by canals in summer, their placid roads were found upon the water, and in winter, when Holland was ice-bound in every part, the smooth surfaces of her frozen roads afforded a pleasant and easy method of reaching the market in every portion of the nation. Generally poor, but of industrious and frugal habit, labor was ever looked upon as honorable, and Holland sought to better the condition of her people by seeking new and distant lands. Two hundred years ago the Dutch were the most venturesome explorers of that time.

No difficulty affrighted them; no danger appalled them; brave beyond all question, and of an honesty that left its impress on Holland's posterity down to the present time. In New York the names are still common which tell of their Dutch origin. The Van Rensselaers, Vanderhorsts, Stevens, Vanderlands, Van Zandts and scores of others have left their indelible impress upon the age and body of the time. History records among its greatest naval heroes the name of Van Tromp, who swept the English channel with a broom fastened to the top of his mainmast, emblematic of the doughty old admiral would say, "O! how I swept those Britons from the sea."

In South Africa the British have encountered one of their most disastrous defeats in the wild and rugged land that lies between the Transvaal and the Orange Free State. Every foot of that land had been bought and paid for by stern old Dutch blood, with tremendous sacrifice and suffering, and will be maintained until the last drop of its blood is mingled with the soil it now defends. The barbarians had been driven back foot by foot and no step of retreat was ever made by the British from the first hour of its settlement. It is difficult to tell to-day in what part of the globe the feelings of our people are most interested in, but on the first announcement of English disaster one could scarcely realize whether he was in London or New York, for we, too, have much fighting to defend our new possession and a army of thirty-five thousand men will help to give us a firm footing in Lazon, the grandest island of the Philippine group. The new recruits are hurrying through our streets and ships of every kind are in great demand to transport the great army to our new possession. At home here things are passingly tranquil; the theaters are crowded, the concert halls are full to the doors and the prize fight can be enjoyed by all comers for from two to twenty-five dollars a seat.

Such a disgusting and terrible spectacle! The morning after the fight every elevated or surface car brought thousands of workers to their daily toil and almost every passenger had his or her paper containing an account of the battle, and it was as good as a panorama to see the absorbing play of the features of the readers when they saw the account of the terrible left hander that almost knocked the champion out.

The fight all through was furious and savage, the blows vicious and wicked. We have a law in this state which makes prize fighting a felony and to leave the state for the purpose of engaging in a prize fight or a duel is a crime of equal caliber.

Forty years ago this city was ruled by prize fighters. It was in the golden days of Yankee Sullivan, John Heenan, John Morrissey, whom the city of New York sent to congress, and Paudene, who was killed in the "Pawtuxte Mass." a notorious thieve's and slingers' den, right under the site of the present New York Tribune office. Such was the condition of things when John Morrissey led his hosts to the assault and Josiah Ryders, at the head of his Empire club, was a terror to all outside politicians who did not wear a gilded collar of the ring.

Then follows a long list of these members of the lesser New York, of which William M. Tweed was a bright and shining light, but whose ultimate end closed in sorrow and ruin. It was he who answered, when questioned of his crimes, "What are you going to do about it?" These words are quoted in the after time as a motto which defines his class and which he stood by many a time till, at last, he found out what an indignant people can do when villainy seeks to subvert the constitutional rights of a people which these heroes were sworn to defend. Years after, from time to time, the two opposite parties met, one of the parties being sworn to win at any cost. At length came the day of reckoning, and the entire supreme batch fell beneath the headman's ax; the blood of a righteous community was all afflame and those who had the city's welfare at heart hunted the criminals down like vermin and scattered them to the four winds of heaven. But, while these legends of the olden time may serve to point a moral or adorn a tale, it is with the battle of to-day that we have to do, and by superior judgment, and I hope, by superior example, it becomes our duty to lead the people back to the point where the fathers of the republic left them; where virtue, with virtue, is better than vice.

Both are difficult. "It's hard to settle down after a trip." "Any harder than to settle up?" "Oh, rango Recon!"

we were living in another world different from that of half a century ago. The whole world seems greater, greater and more powerful than ever.

This world of ours is being explored to its remotest corner and besieged Africa to-day is better known than St. Louis or San Francisco was seventy years ago. The pace set by our ancestors is no longer followed by their children. The twenty miles an hour that was ample speed for 1840 is now the third rate figure of a low-grade railroad car. All has changed with ocean liners and six days between New York and Liverpool no longer suffices for the world's tourist, who on the back of his automobile challenges the 1st class locomotives and skims the air like a bird; nor will he stop till he masters the tongues that were heard at the tower of Babel. Busy life in this city crowds its avenues everywhere and it is hard to realize that mighty armies on the other side of the globe are battling to secure the rights of our newly acquired domain. The small retail merchant weeps over the passing of a day which will never return. Aggregated capital will close up the avenues of small business transaction and human endeavor will be controlled by a greater and more powerful interest, call it a trust or what you will, than man has ever known before since the foundation of the world. Rise up, my brother, put the past behind you, look to the future with its tremendous possibilities and enjoy it when it comes. The past is dead; for if there is no resurrection; the future is for you and for me, with the hope and realization we never knew before. Capital is not and ought not to be your oppressor and your work should be as one, for you should be friends, not enemies. The cry of murder must not again be heard along the great highways of life. A voice of solemn warning is heard from that temple from the heights of Riverside, where sleeps the greatest and most honored soldier of the century. "Let us have peace!" "Let us have peace!" Another great discovery has been made, and that, too, by a lady in this country. "Disease fastened its clutches upon her and for seven years she stood its severest tests, but her vital organs were undermined and death seemed imminent. For three months she coughed incessantly, and could not sleep. She finally discovered a way to recovery, by purchasing of us a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, and was so much relieved on taking first dose, that she slept all night, and with two bottles, has been absolutely cured." Literary Note.

No recent magazine papers have attracted so much attention, afforded so much entertainment and created such lively and widespread discussions as Rollin Lynde Hart's Atlantic Monthly, "The Montanans" and "A New England Hill Town." In his new article, "The Ohiomas," in the November Atlantic, Mr. Hart carries his characteristic method into a new and prolific and widely interesting field; and his pictures of the Buckeye state, and of the "Buckeyes" at home and abroad, will be eagerly read and enjoyed, even by those who recognize themselves as the subjects of his good natured satire, and his keen and amusing characterization. Mr. Hart's methods of observation are not superficial, and his treatment, while distinctly factitious, is not dippant; but he has the unique faculty of seeing the salient points of a community and presenting their humorous side in a manner that is not merely amusing, but also covers a serious purpose, and a keen and thoughtful analysis of the situation.

"The Ohiomas" shows a distinct advance in power over Mr. Hart's former papers and is of universal interest—apart from its humorous treatment—for whatever concerns the great presidential state concerns and interests the whole country.

FARM GARDEN

FOREST TREE PLANTING.

An Effort to Promote It Among Farmers and Landowners.

The division of forestry of the United States Department of Agriculture through a recent circular offers practical and personal assistance to farmers and others in establishing forest plantations, wood lots, shelter belts and windbreaks. Applications for the conditions of such assistance should be made to Gifford Pinchot, forester, Washington, D. C. The design of this undertaking is to aid farmers and other landowners in the treeless region of the west and wherever it is desirable to establish forest plantation. In the interesting explanatory circular, No. 22, Mr. Pinchot touches upon various aspects of forestry. True culture in regions formerly treeless, he says, is dependent largely upon agriculture. Wherever large areas of land have been brought under cultivation the growing of trees is nearly becoming more successful.

Nearly every state of the plains region has among many failures, some admirable examples of plantations of all ages, from 1 to 25 or more years, which have been in every way successful. The success of these plantations, when compared with the more numerous failures, proves the great need for practical experience combined with knowledge of plantations of trees in the west.

The forest plantation at the Agricultural college, Brookings, S. D., of which an interior view is given in the first cut, illustrates what may be accomplished in a few years on the open prairies of the state. This is a mixed plantation, 12 years old, of black locust, cedar, green ash and white oak.

The second cut shows a typical view of a young forest plantation two years after planting. The plot on the left is a mixed planting of box elder, oak, white elm, green ash and black locust.

The plot on the right is set to Russian mulberry, oak, white elm, black locust, honey locust, green ash and box elder. This plantation is at Logan, Utah.

It is not reasonable to suppose that forest tree culture can be made a direct source of great financial profit in the arid regions, but if it can bring in important savings it can save the farmer very considerable expenditures by supplying material which he would otherwise have to buy. The indirect value of well established green ash, wood lots, shelter belts and windbreaks in the protection of their crops, however, is far greater than the cost of the trees.

One of the most important indirect services of forest plantations, and one taken into consideration, is the increased market value of a well wooded farm on the prairie lands of the west over one without timber. Conservation estimates made on the ground indicate that the farms of eastern and central Kansas and Nebraska that have well developed plantations of forest trees upon them, either in the form of wood lots, shelter belts or wind breaks, are worth more per acre than farms without them.

In nearly the whole of the broad prairie belt extending from the woodless regions west to longitude 100° west and reaching from North Dakota to Texas may be grown with varying success. In the western border of the wooded area nearly all the species may be grown which are indigenous to the adjacent woodlands. Farther west the range in selection becomes more and more restricted until the western limit is reached.

A Master Hand.

Not long ago a young chronicomorphous of the 1st class thailands, encountered in a little village of the south of France, a gardener who was, plucked on his clean Sunday blouse, the ribbon of the Legion of Honor. Naturally, the newspaper man despaired to know how he got it. The gardener, however, said it was a secret of his trade, and, to afford a complete coverlet made of the same material.

These butterfly bedclothes are often arranged with an intricacy that is quite curious and perplexing. Sometimes a bed is made so that each separate delicate hair shafts upright, thus giving the entire nest the appearance of a little brush of downy fur. Then again, the eggs are laid spirally round a tiny branch, and, as the covering follows their course, the effect resembles the busy tail of a fox, the nest is more beautiful than the "brush" of the finest fox that ever roamed over earth.

One feature of this nest is the latest earthly labor of the mother butterfly, for by the time it is completed, it is lined with several layers of down plucked from the mother's own soft body. The eggs having been laid carefully upon this luxurious, pretty couch are protected by an equally pretty coverlet made of the same material.
